

Zoltán Szatucsek

director, International Relations and EU projects, National Archives of Hungary

He is a senior archivist of the National Archives of Hungary (NAH), Director of the International Relations and EU Projects Department. He studied history and philosophy in Debrecen and holds an MA in History from the Debrecen University. In the archives his professional fields are electronic records, and digitization with extensive experience in large scale implementation projects. He is an active member of several professional working groups and committees at both national and international level. Represents the NAH as director of the DLM Forum, as Governance Board member of the Archives Portal Europe Foundation and as an expert of the European Commission's European Archives Group. His current interests are contemporary archival theory and memory institutions in modern societies.